

ABSTRACT

A subject of the present application is novel derivatives of imidazopyridine which have a good affinity for certain sub-types of melanocortin receptors, in particular MC4
5 receptors. They are particularly useful for treating pathological states and diseases in which one or more melanocortin receptors are involved. The invention also relates to pharmaceutical compositions containing said products.